The JCM is one of various approaches Japan and the partner countries are jointly developing and implementing. The side event was held to share the recent progresses and expectations on the implementation of the JCM, and attended by around 40 participants including government officials and experts. The discussions included technical issues such as how the JCM fulfills its environmental integrity in line with the COP decisions. Overall the participants welcomed the development of the JCM and shared their high expectations on the continued contributions to global greenhouse gases emission reductions and/or removals by promoting leading low carbon technologies through the JCM.
